MURDER MYSTERY IN AUTO GARAGE

Mutilated Body of Uniontown Man Under Shed.

Uniontown, Pa., Aug. 28 .- With every indication that a murder had been committed, the body of Frank Ringle, aged fifty-four years, who disappeared mysteriously from his home at Point Marion, sixteen miles from here, August 16, was found buried under the floor of the automobile garage of W. L. Harvey at 11o'clock this morning.

Ringle had for some time been acting as superintendent for Harvey, with whom he had formerly been associated in business, for a short time before his disappearance. The head was badly crushed and the body was found one foot under the ground. It was covered with grass, weeds, and loose earth.

The suspicion that Ringle had met with foul play was raised in the mind of Harvey yesterday afternoon, when blood spots were found on the floor in an upper room of the garage.

Regalbuto was twice convicted in his native country of killing men. In the first case he served six months. For the second killing he served eleven years of a sentence of sixteen years and was discharged for good behavior. Regalbuto came direct to Easton from Italy, landing September 5, 1907.

They Spend Last Day in Norfolk in Seeing Sights.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 28.-After their strenuous day of yesterday, the members of the Baltimore, Washington, and Richmond Building Exchanges, who were here as guests of the local exchange, spent to-day looking around Norfolk and

Virginia Beach and other seaside resorts. There was no set programme for the day. Their hosts did more in directing their movements than in entertaining them. Some of the visitors went to church, some went automobiling, and some took a dip in the surf. The interesting and historic sights in and around the city attracted most of them for a part of the

PRESIDENT TAKES PAUL REVERE RIDE

Covers Historic Route in Auto Trip from Dublin.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 28.-With 175 more miles to the credit of the White House touring car, President Taft chugged into Beverly to-night, tired, dusty, and pleased with his trip to the New Hampshire Hills and his reception at the home of Secretary of the Treasury Franklin MacVeagh.

It was the longest motor trip the President has ever made. Part of the road back from Dublin was along the old thoroughfare that heard the flying hoof beats of Paul Revere's steed. Through Concord and Lexington the President passed, but his automobile wakened no minutemen, and the shadows in the woods didn't remind him of the British

Most of the trip from Dublin, the highest town in New Hampshire, was down hill, and the chauffeur of the President's car at times let her out to the thirtyfive-mile-an-hour notch. The Secret Service car and another that followed had no difficulty to-day in keeping up, and the accident of Saturday, when the Secret Service men ran into tire trouble and came into Dublin an hour later, was not repeated.

The President went to church in Dublin this morning with Mrs. Taft, Gov. and Mrs. Quinby, and Secretary and Mrs. MacVeagh. He attended service at the Unitarian Church. Before the service besearch disclosed that there was money in readiness for the fifty-seventh annual gregation. Before leaving Mr. Macin the dead man's clothing.
